A SOUL IS SAVED.
or the Inebriate is placed on the line of Salvation when the individual has taken the Keeley treatment. Those who backslide into error are those who do not place as high an estimate upon the Cure as they should, or likely have made up their minds that they are not quite ready to cease tampering with alcoholic drinks, but have a great desire to taste of it through curiosity, but have no craving for it whatever. They are unstable in mind with little real object in life because they have not set their aims high enough to absorb their mind, soul and body in the noble work of learning to know themselves and their relation to God. The burdens of life on the alcoholic line are easily and quickly removed from the individual patient, and he is restored to his normal condition in bodily vigor—mental powers and quiet nerves within a very few days' treatment.

The backslider or those that relapse are thoroughly cured every time they take a course of Keeley treatment, and after they have relapsed the second time it is fairly good evidence that they do not want to remain cured, or have not got brains enough to desire to live a sober life, or are ineligible for a Keeley Institute.

Those who sincerely desire to be cured and have had enough of drunkenness and its bad effects, respect the Cure and do not relapse. The Keeley Cure solicits this latter specified class.

Saddled Prominent.
This is the name of the worms that are eating the leaves from our trees. Last year the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station observed:
For Maine the saddled prominent has but one brood, and the eggs are laid in June. Oviposition begins soon after mating which occurs the first night after emergence. The eggs hatch in about nine days and the larvae become full grown in five weeks (or more according to weather conditions and food supply). During this time they molt four times. The full grown larvae enter the ground for pupation. In Maine this season pupation took place from mid July to late August, the majority of larvae burying late in July. They pass the winter in the pupal stage, under the leaf mold and the moths emerge in the spring.

The eggs are deposited singly by the female which in captivity applied the eggs to both sides of the leaf. From the reason that during both years over the whole range of the infestation the tops of the trees were stripped first and then the lower branches it is to be concluded that the moths by preference eat the eggs upon the upper leaves. Perhaps the same tendency to fly high may account in part for the fact that the hillside forests were in general more largely attacked than the lowlands, which was noticeable throughout the infested districts.

The saddled prominent do not cling tightly to the leaf or branch. A slight jar will dislodge the caterpillars from their hold and bring them rattling to the ground. They then climb the trunk and go to work again.

Before each of the four molts they carefully spin a thin, broad resting mat where they cling during the molt. The full grown larva drops or climbs to the ground and constructs a cell in the earth or under the leaves at a distance of one to three inches below the surface. The cell is oval and is lined by a thin spinning of silk. The structure is hardly visible by the eye as it is easily broken in throwing back the leaves loose pupae exposed. The insect, after remaining in the pupal stage all winter emerges with the warm spring days.

Beech leaves have been unquestionably the favorite food of this species in Maine. Isolated maple groves as well as maples present with beech in forest growths were stripped often by the saddled prominent alone and sometimes stripped out by the grass striped caterpillar, which has been for two years very numerous. Similarly the attack by the saddled prominent on the oaks was reinforced by the rosy-striped oak-worm.

Saddled prominent were observed to be feeding also upon witch hazel, poplar, blackberry, mountain maple, spirea, cherry, and undoubtedly a full list of food plants would be very long.

The question uppermost in the minds of owners of infested woodlands is whether the stripped trees will die. While it is not possible definitely to predict the degree of injury caused by such an attack, the following statements are of interest in this regard. Weather one controlling factor, hard frosts, excessive drought, or other unfavorable climatic conditions occurring at the time of such a severe stripping of trees increase the danger of fatal results. Under ordinary conditions some species of deciduous trees will stand being stripped for two consecutive years, and recover from the shock. If other conditions are particularly favorable a 3 years seige may not prove fatal. Some species of trees will stand what others cannot.

Several species of bugs have been found to feed on the saddled prominent. Before the middle of July at badly infested places large areas had been already stripped. This happened in many cases before the caterpillars were ready to pupate and though the caterpillars sought new ground, as was evidenced by stripped orchards, herds of caterpillars never reached suitable food and died of starvation. These starving caterpillars would drop from one defoliated tree and climb another only to find that no food awaited them. Many climbed trees they could not eat when nothing remained for them but to drop or climb down and try another.

Where excessive numbers of caterpillars are present in one place, favorable conditions arise for the spread of disease. Late in July and early in August various species of caterpillars were attacked by a disease and in some instances practically the whole infestation of saddled prominent was wiped out.

Birds and domestic fowls eat many soft bodied caterpillars.
Pigs in an orchard, by rooting up and eating the pupae, destroy a large number; also field mice.
For the orchard or shade trees there are several practical measures which have proven successful the past season in preventing economic injury from the saddled prominent.

This species is susceptible to arsenical poisons and the caterpillars readily died on apple trees which were thoroughly sprayed. Arsenate of lead or Paris green will kill the caterpillars. With should be applied as soon as they begin appreciable work. Applications from the middle to the last of June would probably get all these caterpillars which hatched upon the trees.

In case a forest growth is feared, the orchard should be sprayed as soon as the caterpillars begin to travel in search of fresh food.

If trees not already attacked are banded with a sticky substance, the ascent of caterpillars up the trunk will effectively be prevented.

The saddled prominent are readily shaken from the branches. Small trees can be shaken from the ground and larger ones the branches must be shaken. The cool of the morning is the most propitious time for jarring.

The caterpillars once dislodged, their recimbing can be prevented by using a sticky band. A band of tarred paper thickly smeared with equal parts of lard and sulphur has proven helpful in such cases. This mixture should not be applied directly to the back of the tree as there is danger of injury, but with the tarred paper it is safe and effective. Tar hardens so quickly that it has not proven satisfactory in several cases where it has been tried this season. On a smooth trunk tree bark may be tied round allowing about one-third of the top of the bark to drop over, on a bandage a foot wide. The caterpillars will crawl up in this stop and may be killed there.

The Maine Woman Suffrage association held a meeting at Old Orchard Aug. 12. The program was in charge of Mrs. Fannie J. Fernald.

Telephones in the Maine Woods.
One of the most interesting uses to which the telephone has ever been put is reported from the lumber camps of Northern Maine, where lumber camps are finding it an invaluable aid during the logging season. Many and varied are the tasks which the phone has been called upon to perform since its use has become so universal in this country, but this case is rather unique.

Travelers in the heavily wooded sections of Maine have lately noticed the wires strung along with the trunks of trees for supports. These connect with the dams on the streams down which the logs float. Should there be a sudden jam in the mass of lumber making its way down the stream, the telephone is at once pressed into service, and the man at the dam is notified to hold up all logs until the lumbermen above have had time to straighten out the tangle.

In former days this service was performed by relays of shouters. Men stood on the banks of a river at intervals small enough to allow each to be heard by his nearest neighbor. Sometimes the distances from the lumber camp to the log jam and from that to the nearest dam were very great. It can be easily seen what an enormous advantage the loggers with the telephones have.

The most important thing to be considered in the new system of warning is the degree of efficiency of the tree-to-tree telephone service. So it is that the lumbermen take great care in installing their apparatus and stringing the wires. The instruments and apparatus in the Maine woods were leased by the local companies from the Western Electric Company, which supplies all the telephones and accessories used by the Bell Telephone system throughout the country.

An application of the telephone method of logging was witnessed recently on the west branch of the Penobscot River. The water pursues its way over a rough and uneven course, so there are many rough spots over which the logs are to be guided. The men of the crew keep a strict watch on the glint of logs as it nears some big boulder in midstream. Perhaps it will pass down the river and avoid the obstacle—if so, well and good. If the logs hit the obstruction and begin to pile up, then it is time for quick action on the part of the crew.

To shout along the banks of the river for the man away below to shut the gate and keep the lower logs from passing would be the procedure. Now, a-days the man at the telephone gives three long rings, and this attracts immediate attention at the dam. He hurries the order to keep the channel closed; dynamite is applied to the jam, and when the course is clear, another telephone message starts the logs floating downstream again.

Maine is also finding the telephone useful in her war on forest fires. The agent and foreman, Commissioner at Augusta recently had installed a number of telephone sets on look-out stations in the northern part of the state. Men are posted at these commanding spots with telescopes and keep a vigilant lookout for trouble. At the least, the men are to smoke their telephone to the nearest fire-fighting station for help. Without the telephone the woods would have to burn until aid was brought by a courier.

The campaign against forest fires in Maine is a more determined one this season than ever before. Eight watch-towers have been erected, each with its telescope and telephone connection. The watch-towers are on the highest points of land in Hancock, Washington, Somerset, Piscataquis, Aroostook, Penobscot, Franklin and Oxford counties, all of which have felt the effects of the fires in past seasons.

Last year, the damage in Maine amounted to $618,816, according to Commissioner E. E. Ring. The watchmen in their towers this year are able to sweep the entire forest fire section, and at the least sign of smoke their telephones bring them into immediate communication with the nearest settlement and aid is at once dispatched. Foresters are eagerly awaiting a real test of the usefulness of the new system.

Recipes for Blackberry Time.
Baked Blackberry Pudding—Two cupsful of flour into which has been sifted a heaping spoonful of good baking powder, one cupful of sugar, one egg, a tablespoonful of butter and a quart of blackberries. Cream sugar and butter, add the egg well beaten, then stir in the sugar, and when well mixed add the blackberries, mix well, and bake in a greased pan, with room for swelling. Serve hot, with the following sauce.

A Healthful and Appetizing Hard Sauce—One tablespoonful of butter, one cupful sugar and one tablespoonful of sweet cream. Put into a bowl, and stir till well creamed, adding a sprinkling of nutmeg or a few drops of any flavoring you prefer. When creamed add, stirring in lightly, the whipped white of an egg; when this is mixed add two more tablespoonfuls of cream, beat well, and pile on a glass dish. Most hard sauces are indigestible and greasy, but this one is perfectly light, porous and healthful.

Bollied Buddha by Buddha Make an ordinary biscuit dough with sour milk and soda, but put in very little shortening. Roll the dough into a thin sheet, and spread with a generous layer of blackberries, sprinkled thickly with sugar. Roll this over and over into a compact roll; tie up in a floured cloth, drop into boiling water and boil hard for at least an hour. Untie the cloth and roll the pudding out on a large platter; cut in slices and serve hot, dressed with the hard sauce given above.

The doctors say that half the so-called brown tail moth poisoning cases reported in Maine is nothing in the world but food poisoning. And what a proper application of salt and water or witch hazel will put a stop to the average case in a few days. One expert in forestry says he doubts if it would be possible to contract with brown tail moth poisoning because the only way in which the insect is poisonous is during the shedding of the fur when coming out of the cocoon and this does not occur until the middle of August.

At Rumford Point, July 28th, John Thompson lost his house by fire. The dwelling, which was one of the older houses in town, having been built 70 years ago, was a fine specimen of the old and the barn were saved. The fire caught from a spark from the chimney. The house was fully insured and the loss is reckoned at about $900.

Italians Struck.
Several Italians, who were engaged in making excavations for the new water works for Kezar Falls village, quit work because they were not granted extra pay for blasting. They were receiving $1.50 a day, it is understood, for digging and a place was struck where blasting would be required. Then they asked for an increase of 50 cents a day if they were to blast, and it was refused.

A. P. Ricker and Family Have Narrow Escape.
A. P. Ricker and family don't care to take the same chance that they had recently in Bartlett, N. H. Mr. Ricker and wife and Jessie, were taking a trip in their automobile and were coming home via Bartlett. At one place they came in sight of the railroad and before reaching the crossing, saw a train go by. Supposing the coast was clear they did not stop before running on the track, and had got only part way across when they saw a train coming not over 12 or 15 rods from them. The machine had stopped and refused to go on. There was not much time for thinking what was best to do. The engineer saw the trouble ahead and applied the brakes. The train stopped just as it came up to the machine hitting it and causing but slight damage.

The Rickers were all out and expected the machine would be smashed. The engineer should receive much credit for what he did.

Had Read the Idiotic Statute.
When Benjamin F. Butler lived in Lowell, Massachusetts, he had a little black and tan dog. One morning, as he was coming down the street, followed by the dog, a policeman stopped him and told him that, in accordance with an ordinance just passed, he must muzzle the dog.

Next morning he came along with the dog, and the policeman again told him of the muzzling ordinance and requested him to give the dog under care of six lady teachers. PARIS HILL.

Very pretty wedding on the lawn. The prettiest wedding that has occurred at Paris for a long time was when Clara Cary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman Case was married to Arthur Cecil Edwards of Constantinople at "The Old Red House" the summer home of the bride on Monday August 9.

The guests assembled on the lawn of the house where a simple altar had been arranged. The graceful decorations were of golden rod. The Lohngins wedding march was beautifully rendered by Katrien Von Wagenen of New York an intimate friend of the bride, as down an aisle, out-fitted with white ribbon, the wedding procession passed to the altar.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mary Case as maid of honor, her sister Adelaide Case and Vivian Edwards, sister of the groom, brides maids and by her three-year-old niece Gertrude Case who as flower girl walked just before the bride as on the arm of her father she approached the altar. The groom was attended by Morris Carter of Boston's best man.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. John P. Peters D. D. rector of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, New York, assisted by Rev. Dr. George Washburn of many years, president of Robert College in Constantinople. As Dr. Peters is a non-resident he acted under a special license granted by the governor.

Following the ceremony was a brief reception. The receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman Case, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cecil Edwards, Miss A. T. Case, Miss Edwards, Miss M. C. Case and Mr. Carter. The Swasticker Orchestra furnished music during the reception, the wedding dance and during the breakfast which followed.

After the usual ceremonies of wedding cake and scattered bouquet the bride withdrew to prepare for going away and the guests to make ready for a happy send off.

Double lines formed on each side the long walk and when the bride appeared dressed for leaving showered all kinds of flowers and good wishes over her, and after the automobile in which the first stage of the long journey was made.

The bride's dress was lace, long white satin the veil of tulle with wreath of natural flowers, she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and maiden hair fern. The maid of honor wore white silk mull over white, the flower girl white with yellow ribbons.

One lovely thing was when the sun which had been hidden during all the afternoon shone brilliantly on the bride as she turned from the altar, "Happy the bride the sun shines on her!"

Many beautiful gifts attested the love and esteem with which the bride is regarded by her many friends who wish her much happiness in her new life.

After a somewhat extended tour in Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will be at home at Ronnihil Huislo, Constantinople.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Case, Miss Case, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Case, Mary Francis Case, Catherine Case, Elizabeth Case, New York; Dr. and Mrs. Peters of New York; Dr. and Mrs. Washburn of Constantinople; Miss Edwards of Constantinople; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bates of Chicago; Mrs. Geraldine of New York; Dr. John T. Cushing, Dr. and Mrs. Irish, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Bradford, Mrs. Bearse, Mr. and Mrs. Adams of Turner; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Chase, Mrs. Otha Chase of Chase's Mills; Miss Peters, Miss Smith, Miss W. Wagon, Miss Rich of New York; Miss Brown of Plainfield N. J.; Prof. and Mrs. Warren the Missers Warren of Albany; Judge Hale of Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore of New York; Miss Thurston of Portland; Miss Putnam of New York; Miss Conover of New York.

WATERFORD.

Major Charles W. Stevens.
Major Charles W. Stevens of Boston, died July 28, at the home of Mrs. Eliphaz Porter in South Waterford, aged 78 years.

Maj. Stevens was born in Portland in 1831. He was a son of Capt. Jeremiah Stevens, a prominent ship-captain of the last century. Since his 21st year of age, he has resided in Boston, and was for years in the wholesale woolen trade as a member of the firm of Dresser & Stevens. He was in the military service of the government during the Civil War, and was for many years an honored member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, and was Commander of that distinguished corps in 1881. During that year he visited England, bearing several handsome presents to the Honorable Artillery Company of London, from which he received a complimentary gift of an elegant officers' sword.

Since Maj. Stevens' retirement from business he has spent many years among the lakes of Maine, and was familiar with Umbagog, Richardson, Rangeley, Schoodic and other lakes and their delightful environments. He was a famous amateur fisherman, well-known in many Maine summer resorts, and in the Adirondack regions of New York. He was the author of a treatise on "Fly-fishing in Maine lakes, or camp life in the wilderness," which became a useful hand-book for amateur fishermen in many parts of the country. For the last 19 years Maj. and Mrs. Stevens have resided much of the time in Waterford as guests of the Lake House. He was greatly attached to this locality and will be much missed by his numerous friends here and elsewhere.

The burial was at Forest Hill cemetery, near Boston. The funeral cortege from Waterford to the railroad train at Harrison on the day after the decease of Maj. Stevens consisted of an escort of brothers of Mt. Tiram Lodge of Masons of Waterford.

The party of relatives of the deceased who were present and accompanied the remains to Boston were: Mrs. Eliza A. Stevens, the widow of Maj. Stevens, and Mrs. Helen, wife of Eugene Stowell of Medford.

Woodpeckers.

Attack Telephone, Telegraph, and Electric

Considerable damage is being done to telephone, telegraph, and electric light poles by members of the woodpecker family. These birds originally built their homes in the dead or dying trunks or limbs of trees, but for some reason best known to themselves, have come to the conclusion that the peeled pole offers better conditions for a home.

They have become so ravenous of late that their depredations are attracting considerable attention among those who are compelled to use quantities of wood. Such poles, cedar poles seem to be the ones most frequently attacked. The birds bore into them at any height from the ground, and the holes which they make are often two or three inches in diameter and four or five inches deep. Such an amount of wood drilled from a stick of timber which is carrying a load of wires naturally weakens the strength of the line.

It would, of course, not be a difficult matter to exterminate these birds. However, this is not desirable, as they are among the most beneficial forms of bird life native to this country, because they destroy large numbers of insects which seriously damage forest and farm crops. It seems, therefore, that methods should be undertaken to compel the birds to revert to their former habit of boring rather than to exterminate them.

In the South it was found that poles which had been impregnated with creosote oil were not attacked by the birds, whereas untreated poles under the same conditions were very severely injured. Whether or not creosote will prevent such attack is not definitely known, but the Service is investigating the problem, and should this oil prove a preventative, it will fulfill a two-fold purpose: It will protect the poles from decay and destruction from animal life. If their holes are filled up they will simply drill another.

The postoffice at Meadowview has been discontinued. The mail goes to Canton.

A Heartfelt Greeting.

Words of Welcome from Mrs. Marshall, President of Z. L. Packard Relief Corps, Hebron, to the Woman's Relief Corps of Norway and the Ladies of the G. A. R., South Paris, on a Recent Visit.

VISITING FRIENDS:—It is with great pleasure that the Z. L. Packard Relief Corps, No. 92, welcomes you to Hebron on this, our fourth birthday. Perhaps some of you have met with us on similar occasions and therefore know something of us, while others perhaps visit us for the first time today. But to all we extend a cordial greeting, and trust that the day may be one of restful enjoyment to you.

It is through these social gatherings that we are brought in close touch with each other, becoming more acquainted and the strengthening our love and interest in each other and for the work in which we are associated. I think as ladies of different Corps, but united in the same grand work, can all join hands and say, God bless the work of the W. R. C.

I have mentioned that today is our fourth birthday. Therefore it is quite natural that it should be somewhat reminiscent. During our four years' history we have passed through days of prosperity and days of adversity as all such associations must needs pass through. Our days of adversity it seems to us have been deeply marked by losses, we having lost during our four years of existence, three by death and two by transfer cards.

Our first loss by death having been in the early part of our third year when our first president, Mrs. Fannie D. Stearns, a loyal, lovable woman, who served us faithfully for two and one-half years, was summoned to the higher life. Then in a few short months our oldest member, a wise counselor, Mrs. Cordelia B. Everett, was called to her Heavenly home.

Last December we lost another strong and worthy worker, our patriotic instructor, Miss Bertha L. Packard, the eldest daughter of the late Z. L. Packard, for whom this Corps was named.

But while we feel these losses heavily, our interest is unflagging. Our days of prosperity have been marked by the addition of new members thus swelling our ranks from 19 charter members to 44 now in good standing. Not a large Corps but we trust a loyal one.

Under the efficient leadership of our patriotic instructor, Josephine B. Hildes, who is now away on her summer vacation and greatly missed by us, and other willing workers there has been some patriotic work accomplished among our children in our public schools as well as other work for which the W. R. C. was organized.

The more work we do in true service the more we wish to do. And why should we not have a growing interest? Is it not for our best interest and the interest of our children that we do all we can to promote the cause of Patriotism? We are simply caring for the legacy left us by those who offered themselves a willing sacrifice upon the altar of patriotic devotion, that all generations coming after might enjoy a country of liberty, peace and justice.

It is up to us to see to it that we are loyal citizens and that our children grow to love their country and their flag. Let us scatter around the Union veterans the laurels of respect and charity. Let us strive to live in honor of the fallen heroes. Let us join hearts and hands and press forward guided by our motto, "Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty."

The Western Maine Advent Camp-meet will be held at West Baldwin beginning Aug. 28, holding over Sept. 5.

Wood Waste Decreasing.

The waste wood heap continues to diminish and pass away.

A manufacturer of brushes recently made a discovery in Maine which surprised him with material exactly suited to his purpose. He went to Pine Tree State to buy wood for the backs of hair brushes and the handles of shaving brushes, and chanced to visit the yards of a spool maker who was using white birch. The spool man took the white part of the wood only, and was throwing away the red hearts. Thousands of cords had been burned or dumped in the lake to be rid of it.

The red hearts were exactly what the brush maker wanted, and at little more than the expense of freight he supplied his factory.

This is typical of the trend of manufacturing. Waste of wood is still great, but it is decreasing. What one factory can not use, another turns to profit. Formerly mills threw away half the forest-tops left in the woods, sawdust dumped in streams to pollute them and destroy fish, slabs burned in perpetual bonfires, and defective logs and low grade lumber abandoned as not worth moving.

This policy does not generally prevail now. Some mills have put in machinery to work up their own by-products, others sell their waste to manufacturers who can use it, as in the case cited in Maine. The properties and uses of woods are now subjects of careful investigation, and the problem of turning to account the odds and ends and the by-products is brought more to the front now than formerly.

The United States Forest Service has taken up this study in a comprehensive and systematic way.

Legend of Tea.

Tea, says an eastern legend, first brought balm to man long ago in the fifth century, A. D., when the son of a powerful Indian rajah first stepped from his boat on to the shores of China. The young man was possessed of a desire to live in religious solitude. His food was to be the nuts and roots and herbs of the forest; his drink, the cool running water of the streams.

Among his strict vows was one that he would never thew close his eyes. But so great was his exhaustion that he fell asleep in spite of himself when he reached the shade of the row of trees that bordered the coast. And great was his sorrow when he awoke. To punish himself for having broken the vow, he slashed off his eyelids with his knife and cast them on the ground.

The next day he chanced to pass by the spot where he had succumbed to sleep. What was his surprise to see, in the spot where he had thrown his eyelids down a strange bush growing. Radma tasted the leaves. He found them deliciously fragrant. Then to his joy, he learned that by simply chewing these leaves he could readily keep awake, no matter how great his fatigue. And this quality of stimulation from sleepiness tea has always retained, the legend concludes.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is appendicitis?"

"My son," answered the cynical parent, "appendicitis is something that enables a good doctor to open up a man's anatomy and remove his entire bank account."

Wheat Cleaned Six Times

"The equipment for wheat cleansing is as extensive and expensive as that for grinding purposes. The freedom of flour from dirt and bacteria shows in its appearance."

PROP. WM. JACO, in National Association Review.

Wheat specially selected for William Tell Flour is stored in hermetically sealed tanks, at Ansted & Burck's big mills.

It is cleaned six times before grinding. Everything—even the sewing of the bags—is done by clean, bright machinery.

Note how much purer William Tell is than other flours. This means wheat cleaning by the most complete equipment known to modern milling science.

William Tell Flour has the brilliant bloom such as only Ohio wheat can make. Ask your dealer, and insist on having—
